

LEADERS PANNING THE HOUSE ACTION

Impression Is Little Will Be Accomplished This Session.

LIKELY TO ADJOURN
IN APRIL OR MAY

Practically Nothing Will Be Done
In Matter of Legislation
Before the Holidays.

By JOHN SNURE.

It is to be a do-nothing Congress as far as the leaders in the House and Senate can make it. For a long session it will be brief, and the expectation now is that there will be early adjournment. Talk is that the session will end in April or in early May at the latest, provided, of course, there are no unforeseen developments that compel the prolongation of it.

Already talk is going around that almost nothing is to be done before the holidays. Things will be shifted over until after the first of the year. This does not apply to the work of some of the House committees on appropriations, which will do their utmost to hurry along appropriation bills and get them on the calendar. For instance, the House Committee on Military Affairs will in all probability have the army bill reported before the holiday adjournment. The House Appropriations Committee, headed by Chairman Tamm, will rush along the appropriation bills under its jurisdiction as rapidly as possible. The Senate committees in charge of appropriation measures will proceed more leisurely.

But when it comes to other important legislation, the disposition is to handle it gingerly, to proceed slowly and deliberately.

Single Exception.

To this, there is one important exception, and that is the ship subsidy bill. The leaders have made up their minds to force legislation on this subject. The President has come out for it in his message. All over the country in those districts where the opposition to subsidy legislation is the most rampant, there has been a campaign on for months to make converts to subsidy legislation. The situation in the House in recent years has always been close on this proposition. The conversion of a few votes will pass a bill. The subsidy supporters think they have the votes. They are sure of the Senate. The plan being talked of is to have the House Committee on Merchant Marine report the subsidy bill out before the holidays and try to pass it before this is done. A careful effort will be made to feel out the situation and see whether there is any danger of a filibuster. One reason for this is that, despite the confident predictions of the friends of subsidy legislation that they will pass a bill, the Democrats, and other opponents of subsidy are declaring they believe they can prevent the passage of a subsidy measure.

When it comes to postal savings legislation, railroad legislation, legislation on control of corporations, conservation legislation, and legislation on labor matters, as well as on a number of other important lines, it is evident the leaders are not so sure. They are slow and do not go any farther than absolutely necessary. If they could put through the appropriation bills and then adjourn, this program would be more satisfactory than any other.

One phase of the legislative situation that will tend to make it difficult for the passage of any important measures outside of appropriation bills is that the effort to economize will make the discussion of appropriation matters more prolonged than it is usually.

Even the activities of the new Senate Committee on Public Expenditures are criticised in some quarters as one of the devices for killing time and stalling off matters other than appropriation bills.

HOPES SO.

"I notice you never write any editorials condemning the idle rich," "I do not. Who knows but I may be sought to suit a piece myself, some day?"—Cleveland Leader.
